when mr o came in after answering a few questions he said that if we had any questions on what he had said last time we must ask them then as he would not come back to the subject again we would have other things to talk about later during the meeting he would go over what he had said after a certain number more questions he said that when speaking of i it was necessary to realize that in special doctrine i could be spoken of in five ways on five different levels man in his ordinary state is a multiplicity of i s this is the first meaning on the diagram this is indicated by the square of i s when he decides to start work an observing i appears this is shown shaded in on the diagram this is the second meaning the next meaning indicated by the smallest circle is where deputy steward appears who has control over a number of i s the fourth meaning indicated by the middle circle is where steward appears he has control over all i s the fifth meaning is that of master he is drawn as a big circle outside as he has time body he knows the past and also the future although there must be degrees of this it was interesting to connect this diagram with that of the carriage horse driver and master in the carriage or physical body are certain of the larger i s the horse and driver that is in feeling and thought are the many small i s in the square representing master is first the observing i then the deputy steward then the steward and finally the master is shown as a circle encircling the whole diagram these diagrams are to be regarded as so to speak supplementary diagrams when speaking of the division i and jones he called the division jones false personality this phrase was for convenience

when talking and avoided having to say either ouspensky smith jones etc it must not be confused with the division essence and personality the divisions which he spoke about last time must be kept separate for instance the idea of rolls must not be connected with that of i rolls were connected with the idea of centres which were regarded as consisting of rolls i s on the other hand were connected with the idea of consciousness of the four states of consciousness sleep state waking state state of self remembering and objective state it was the continuous change of i s which made up our ordinary waking state the idea of rolls and the idea of i s were two quite different aspects of man they were as different as gas and electric light there were some questions about essence mr o said that we must remember all that we had heard about essence essence was what we were born with capacities and incapacities it was also connected with type essence was also connected with physical body from the point of view of work all we had was personality at the very beginning magnetic centre would bring the observing i into being
